Key Takeaway:

Home price growth in 2026 is expected to slow, with nationwide appreciation projected at just 1.3% as affordability challenges persist. While supply and sales may improve slightly, elevated mortgage rates and rising ownership costs will continue to limit demand and keep homeownership difficult for many.

TOP 10 METRO MARKETS

The Midwest and Northeast are projected to have the strongest housing markets next year due to:

- Lower Home Prices: More affordable than other regions.
- Job Market Access: Close proximity to major employment centers maintains steady demand.

BOTTOM 10 METRO MARKETS

Housing markets in Florida, Texas, and Louisiana have weakened as buyer interest drops. Homeownership costs, driven by insurance, taxes, and homeowners' association fees, have increased, while new construction boosts inventory. These factors are driving prices down, according to the forecast.
